SPIRIT

Shrewsbury High School

"Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans—born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage—and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world."

Excerpt from John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address

OF '66

The Spirit of '76 lives on today. It is not forgotten in our memories because we are near the cradle of liberty and the battlegrounds of freedom. In the heritage that was bequeathed to every American from colonial America was a large measure of that spirit. It is now a part of our national and individual character.

Today more than ever the spirit of America is animating the world. With it the frontiers of the mind are being pushed back and the frontiers of space are being assaulted and deeper dimensions of democracy are being achieved.

Every generation of Americans has new, different, and more staggering challenges to contend with, and every generation has somehow risen to meet and best those challenges.

It is because the Spirit of '76 keeps renewing and refreshing itself that we call it today . . .

the Spirit of '66

Dedication

Mr. William J. Coulter, Jr.

The aim of our education has been to instill in us a sense of values, needed skills, and an appreciation of the verities of life. We have learned by reading, by listening, by instructions; we have learned most of all by observing.

Memories are made of observations, and in our memories will glow the ever-present remembrance of those adults who have guided us. Chief among them is the man to whom this volume is dedicated.

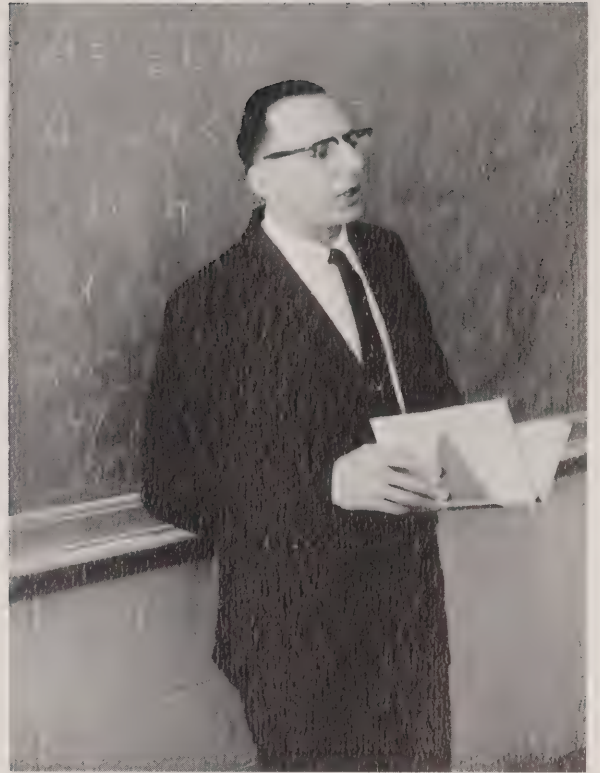

As an educator he is devoted to his profession and is a very able exponent of his specialty, mathematics. As an advisor to our class he has shown equal devotion to our objectives, our success, our happiness. As an adult friend he has been noted for his friendly firmness, constructive criticism, and a deep feeling for our problems and progress. But above all, he has created and sustained for us a spirit that we all can now so readily recognize as the "Spirit of '66."

In honoring him as our dedicatee we are actually honoring ourselves, because, as we have in the past, we are bound in the future to bask in the glory of our association with him. His fame and influence with us and others will not diminish with the years, but will auspiciously prosper.

In acknowledgment of all that he has contributed to our class and our lives, we do proudly dedicate the 1966 Colonial to . . .

Mr. William J. Coulter, Jr.

The English language is our greatest tool and our most powerful weapon. It is a medium of mass communication and a method of relaxation. Eleven Shrewsbury English teachers spend a majority of their time expounding its virtues in the hope that we may learn and appreciate its intricacies. To them we say, in the language of their trade, thank you.

Mathematics, the language of the sciences, is rapidly becoming the language of our age. It is intricate and powerful, and Shrewsbury's progressive Math teachers spend countless hours teaching students how to "speak" it, and do so fluently. The complexities of mathematical problems and formulæ become less confusing with the benefit of teacher's explanations and examples, and Euclid gradually grows from a stranger to a friend. The Math teachers of Shrewsbury deserve a special thanks, "for they also serve who only stand and wait"—for it to sink in.

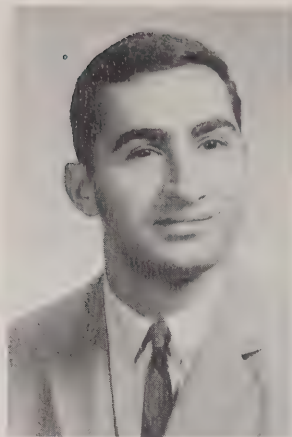

Mr. Jacobs demonstrates a difficult problem to his Advanced Math class.

To the men and women of the Science Department falls the task of educating Shrewsbury students in the areas of physical, chemical, and biological processes. Each is a skilled technician in his trade, and through the combined and diligent efforts students gradually become enlightened in a field of increasing importance. These scientists represent the students' ladder to progress and their vital contribution to our school system is well noted.

As important as the present and future are to our generation, a knowledge of past occurrences is imperative if we are to proceed successfully. The aim of the Social Studies Department is to make SHS students aware of the world about them—geographically, historically and sociologically. Since there is no greater nor more important relationship on earth than that of man to man, it is doubly important for us to appreciate the history of mankind, the influences which have affected that history and the stage on which it was and is still being produced.

Mr. Robert Stebbins explains an article from Newsweek to Seniors Ann Kehoe and Jerry Boyer.

Among the requirements for a suitable secretary is good typing. Here at Shrewsbury students are taught by capable business teachers.

In today's technical and fast-moving world the need for good secretaries, typists, clerks, bookkeepers, and machine operators is greater than ever. The only way to obtain well-trained office workers is through the efforts of highly trained teachers and proficient equipment. The Business Department at Shrewsbury High has both. Students not only learn stenography, bookkeeping, typing, and so forth, but also learn to apply them to typical business procedures. Teaching, learning, and applying are all important factors of our business training.

As the world grows continually smaller and opportunity for foreign travel increases, the need for solid foundation in languages is becoming more and more evident. To a great extent, a person's success in any language, be it Latin, French, or Spanish, depends upon the capabilities of the teacher. Shrewsbury may well be pleased with itself, not only because of its expert instructors, but also because of its modern equipment and active outside program affiliated with the Language Department.

In art the student creates beauty for the eyes. Here Nancy Parmenter molds a vase from clay.

Music Department

Mr. Lorne A. Ford
Department Head

Mr. Louis J. Vella

Mr. Ralph A. Metcalf

Music and Art are the universal languages understood and appreciated by all nations. The purpose of the two departments at Shrewsbury is to develop the special talents of those students who are interested in these two areas. Our teachers are specialists in their field, devoted to exposing and enriching the diverse talents of SHS students. Working many hours after school, the teachers in these departments help their students to better appreciate the aesthetic qualities of Art and Music.

In orchestra, band, and glee club the student creates beauty for the ears.

Mrs. Barbara B. Caron

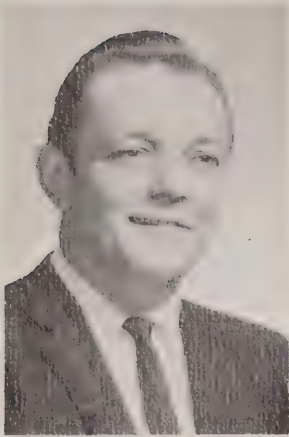

A highly developed brain is nothing if it is not housed in a sound and physically alert body. The physical education instructors at SHS aim to perfect the students' physical capabilities in ways that are both fun and profitable. The once weekly gym class required of all students is supplemented by athletics and gym leadership classes for those who wish to pursue physical prowess to greater degrees. "A strong body" is their motto and our aim.

The girls, no less than the boys, are conscious of physical fitness. Here Cindy Frissora and Kathy Keddy practice climbing the ropes.

Mr. Fountaine shows one of his woodworking students how to use one of the machines.

Perhaps no other courses are more important in high school than those that prepare and polish the domestic talents of the girls and the mechanical abilities of the boys. Skillful instructors show SHS girls the finer points of cooking, sewing and caring for a home. Industrial Arts teachers instruct boys in mechanical drawing, metal work, electronics, and woodworking. Honors are numerous in these two fields, and they show the importance that they have gained and are given at Shrewsbury.

In the offices of the various counsellors the freshman begins his high school career and the senior ends it. The advice offered to each individual by these sages is probably the most important single factor in programming and enjoying four vital years. Countless problems have been solved, numerous schedules have been changed, and the courses of many lives have been determined within the guidance offices. Thanks to professional and personal guidance SHS students can enjoy a happy and rewarding high school experience.

Mrs. Hilda Quatela
School Nurse

The guardian of our health and the guardian of our minds are two very important people at Shrewsbury High. When the pressures and pace of scholastic life become too much we seek the professional advice of Mrs. Quatela to care for our ills; and when the pressure is on to get a term paper written or a book report done we seek the capable assistance of the librarian, Mrs. Ober. These two women offer invaluable contributions to the school community.

SENIORS

Sometimes the demands of the time or the conditions create the spirit of the age. Sometimes the exuberance of the period or of the people gives rise to the spirit. The spirit is not dead. It takes many shapes, forms, manifestations. It is the spirit of the class, the school. It is . . .

the Spirit of '66

Here we stand. Two hundred twenty-four of us on the brink of something new and vital—and spirited. We are ready to accept, to challenge, to create, to destroy, to govern. We stand here tensed on the edge of maturity, ready to take the inevitable step with a sense of eagerness, but with a sense of reluctance, too. We are the youth and body of America; we are . . .

the Spirit of '66

The most precious element that the country has is the vitality, ambition, drive, loyalty and enthusiasm of its young people. Young people provide the fresh intelligence, the dynamism, the imagination, the feeling for the nation's progress; the elders provide the experience, the wisdom, the caution. The energy, the spark comes from the young; the steerage and braking comes from the elders. No matter what the challenges of future, the obstacles to further progress or fuller life, it will be the spirit of the young that will smooth the way. It will be . . .

Senior Class Advisors

Mrs. Frances M. Cellucci

Miss Mary J. Murray

The class of 1966 is an animate, forceful, opinionated being. To govern it we have elected four capable officers; to guide it we have had appointed four knowledgeable, understanding, and unselfish class advisors. Throughout four years we have discovered that their time is our time; their hopes are our goals; their standards are our ideals. If we have been successful, if we are admired, if our opinion is valued by others, a great share of the credit must be bestowed upon our advisors.

To these four the Class of 1966 owes eternal gratitude, and to them we can only say in deepest appreciation and sincerity—Thank you.

Mr. William J. Coulter, Jr.

Mr. Joseph A. Lalli

SECRETARY
Janet Saxton

To the Class of 1966:

High school is a small but very important part of our lives, for it is in high school that goals are set and attitudes formed. Goals are, no doubt, important, but the attitude that is taken toward achieving them far outweighs the actual attainment. This is what has distinguished us from, and made us rise above, other classes.

Our goals have been high, this yearbook stands as proof. But the attitude that was taken by the class toward carrying them out has made me feel a great deal of pride in our class. I know that you feel the same way. Over the past years I have watched our class very closely, and never once have I seen an instance of single-mindedness; never have we acted as and for individuals—we have always worked for the good of all.

This attitude will not be left behind when we leave Shrewsbury High on Graduation Day, but will be taken with us and applied diligently in the future.

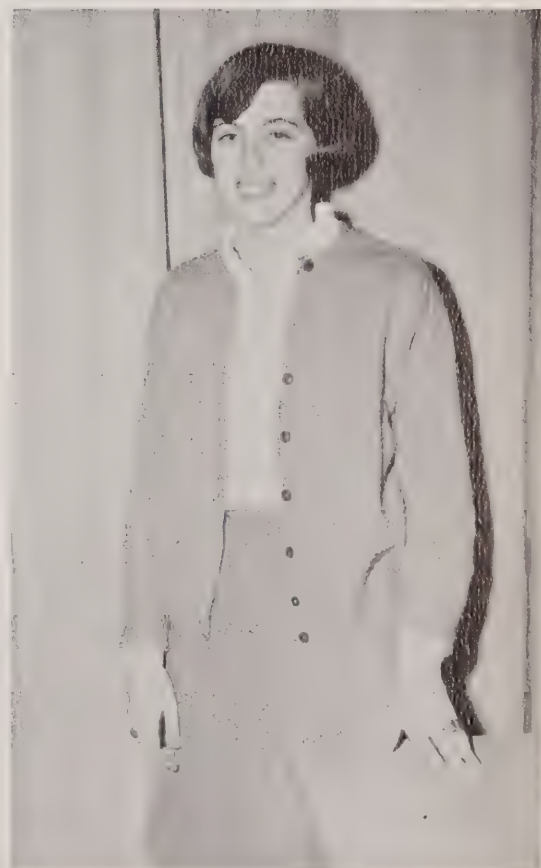

Perhaps the memories of our prom, class projects, and graduation will drift from our minds, but the feeling and talent we have for working together for the benefit of all will never leave us.

And so this is why I say that we, as Seniors, represented the true "Spirit of '66"; but for the rest of our lives our energy and vitality will represent the true spirit of America.

UNDERCLASSMEN

As we move on, others move along the steps to a higher education. Underclassmen will soon know the joys and pitfalls of being Seniors, but their progress to this coveted level will seem slow, though memorable. We wish them well in the race that we have just completed, and hope their years may be as complete and wonderful as ours have been.

In Memoriam

Sally Winslow

"The woods are lonely, dark, and deep.
But I have promises to keep.
And miles to go before I sleep.
And miles to go before I sleep."

Robert Frost

The "Spirit of '66" leads us onward, driving us over the miles that we must conquer before we rest. But rest we must, as one of us has already done.

Nature wields its powerful hand in mysterious ways; ways that we can not understand and find hard to accept. Sally's loss to us this year was one that was felt deeply, one that will be long remembered, one that will be long questioned. The Class must go forward, but for all our sufferings we choose to think that she has none, and for all our rewards, we choose to think that hers are greater.

ACTIVITIES

The essence of schooling is the basic education we receive, and, to the students at SHS, this is complemented by a variety of activities that give the essence its glow. Our memories of Shrewsbury are filled with glorious moments, and most of them have occurred while participating in extra-curricular events. To be involved in at least one of them is a rewarding and unforgettable experience.

Student Council Do?"

You check your choices for class officers and student council members and place your ballot in a machine run by a young man. Why?

The Student Council is running the class elections. You watch as the co-captains of the football team accept an impressive trophy from Auburn at the fall sports assembly. How come?

Because the Student Council has arranged for both the sports assembly and the trophy.

You see there is a Latin Club meeting on Monday and a dance on Friday night and a cake sale next week. How do you know?

You check the calendar of events published monthly by the Student Council. You dislike the way some department is run or you complain about the state of the bleachers at a football game. What do you do?

You place your suggestions or complaints in a box specifically maintained for that purpose in the library by the Student Council.

Eighteen members from four classes work 185 days a year to represent you. It is not a social organization or a club that meets every other Monday. It is democracy at work, and it is work, and it is working for you.

"We, the Student Council members of Shrewsbury High School, do hereby solemnly pledge to fulfill our delegated duties and to promote the general welfare of our school."

"Fold your ballot the long way" is repeated several hundred times as council members conduct fall elections.

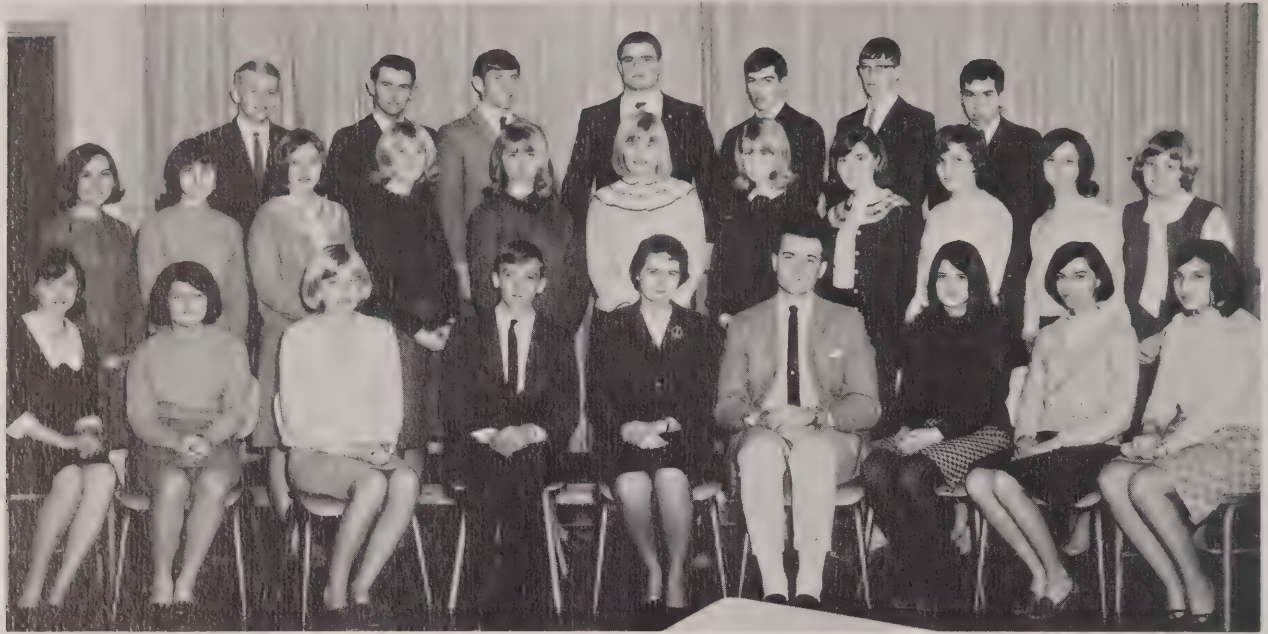

Members of the Leadership Training committee meet to discuss ideas on how the student body should be made aware of current problems.

Several council members await the arrival of Mr. Cooke to draw up an appropriate dress code for SHS students.

The Officers of Shrewsbury's National Honor Society
Treasurer Laurel Rafferty, Vice-President Gerry Graham,
Secretary Karen Nordstrom, and President Peter Fohlin.

The members of the National Honor Society listen attentively to a discussion on their current project—donation of a much-needed water filter to the Peace Corps in Nigeria.

For students that have consistently proved to be outstanding in the areas of scholarship, leadership, character, and service there is a revered organization known as the National Honor Society. All students who are elected to membership in the Society are chosen by a faculty committee representing each department, Juniors in late April, Seniors in January.

The National Honor Society is maintained specifically to provide services to the school, the individual, and the community. This year the Society, in conjunction with the Student Council, raised money for a water filter to be sent to a Peace Corps volunteer working with underprivileged children in a Nigerian school. The National Honor Society also sponsors a scholarship, to be presented at graduation, for an SHS student to further the ideal of higher education. The members of the Society unselfishly donate their time and service to others in a generous and willing spirit.

For the valiant students that yearly struggle through the Commentaries of Caesar and the Orations of Cicero, the Latin Club provides a form of relaxation and explanation. Its organization is patterned on that of ancient Rome, with Paul Olson and Kenneth Oclatis serving as Co-consuls and Nancy Perednia as Scriba.

The members of the club meet at monthly meetings, which are followed by a planned program, such as the informal talk by Mrs. Irving Donahue early in the year. The Activities Chairmen try to co-ordinate programs of the Latin Club in a manner that provides both entertainment and an insight into the culture of the people whose language they study.

Since the majority of Shrewsbury High language students study the flowing dialogue of France, the French Club boasts the largest membership of any of the language organizations. The club's goal is to promote interest in the French people and modern France through guest speakers native to France, illustrations of French customs in the Christmas party, and a banquet at an authentic French restaurant. Headed by an active and dedicated all-senior executive board, the club strives to make the French language and culture familiar to students who one day, hopefully, may have cause to use it.

From the land of bull fights, El Cid, and taquilla comes the romantic language of Spain—the language that many SHS students have chosen to study. To promote and sustain interest in the language and culture of the Spanish people is the principal aim of the Spanish Club, and its aim is carried out by projects and discussions at the monthly meetings.

Headed by an executive board composed of members from three high school classes, the Spanish Club has undertaken the partial support of a Peruvian child in addition to its other projects.

A language of growing importance, Spanish will prove helpful to those who are learning its intricacies and the Spanish Club strives to illuminate this importance.

Clicking heels and clapping hands marked the visit of the Spanish Club to José Greco in Boston on March 25.

Español, Señor?"

James Gilmond gains undivided attention as he explains the club's most important project—finances.

Q. "What is the name of Spain's national anthem in English?"
A. "The National Anthem."

Miss Howard, advisor, casts a furtive look over the proceedings. One can almost hear her say—"Pues, pues."

The president conducts a meeting of the Spanish Club with a slightly Latin flavor.

Officers Tom Atwood, Jim Taylor, and Diane Barsoum conduct a meeting.

Affirmation, status quo, colleague, inflexion: this is the detailed terminology that our N.F.L. members use, and they use it quite effectively, for Shrewsbury's forensic members have a formidable reputation for excellence. Students who participate in forensics, debate, extemporaneous speaking, dramatic and humorous interpretation, original oratory and Student Congress are a special breed—a dedicated, hard-working, determined-to-win breed. Because there is little material gain, these students work for knowledge of current affairs, poise and relaxation in public speaking, and for the sense of satisfaction that a winning team creates.

The awards in the trophy case outside the library have been hard-earned by these N.F.L. members. It represents their "blood, sweat, and tears," and the pride and respect in which SHS, and New England, have in them.

Strike Fear!

"I'll just smile and say nothing, but you would think they could send a bus on these debate trips."

"Try a size 7¼? I don't know. How do you think this fits?"

"Oh, please! I didn't mean to lose!" "No one from Shrewsbury loses!"

Under the able leadership of Mr. Lorne Ford, the band played concert after successful concert.

Eagerly awaiting Mr. Ford's cue, Steve Luce readies his tuba to make his entrance on time.

Bringing entertainment and school spirit to football games; providing classical, contemporary, martial, and sacred music in assembly programs and concerts; representing Shrewsbury High School in the community and throughout New England—these are but a few of the functions of the Band. But the essence of any musical organization lies not only in its accomplishments but more greatly in the dedication of its members. Under the direction of Mr. Lorne A. Ford and through the leadership of its officers and the efforts of each member, the Band has achieved the satisfaction of individual development and combined musical excellence.

Laurel Rafferty and Linda Cushing lead the saxophone section through a difficult passage of music.

The sweetly resonant strings of the violins blend with the deeper chords of the basses, the treble notes of the woodwinds and brasses, and the thundering sounds of the percussions. This melodic mixture meshes to form a symphony or sonata played with ease and skill by the Shrewsbury High School Orchestra. Under the direction of Mr. Ralph Metcalf, talented musicians gain invaluable experience in speaking the world's universal language.

of Music"

Under the able leadership of Mr. Louis Vella, the Glee Club was able to perform many difficult numbers successfully.

The halls are alive with the "Sound of Music." They echo the melodious voices of Glee Club members, who do not reserve their spirited singing for classes and practice rooms alone. Under the able direction of Mr. Louis Vella the Shrewsbury High School Glee Club has matured into a group that is respected and praised—both for the quality of its performance and the quality of its performers.

Each student is a vital link in the chain that makes a polished performance. Alone his melifluous voice is a soft hum; joined with others it becomes a reverberating swell that fills a concert hall with memorable music. The Shrewsbury Glee Club—precision and perfection personified.

The auditorium is alive with "the sound of music."

The Shomty Club is maintained for the Junior and Senior students who are taking at least two business subjects. The purposes of the club are to promote leadership in its members and inspire them to serve the community to the best of their ability. The students carry out their aims while still at SHS by donating an annual Christmas basket to a needy family in Shrewsbury.

As with most clubs at Shrewsbury, Shomty finds that money is a necessity—and a cake sale and candy sale are held during the year to secure funds. Its reception of new members in October, annual Christmas party, and the banquet at the end of the year provide the social enjoyment for its rapidly increasing membership.

Shomty provides an invaluable experience for business students, and its alumnae go on to success in a fast-paced world.

For the girls that strive to learn and cultivate domestic skills while still in high school, there is a special organization that aims at promoting and utilizing their talents. The Homemaking Club is a civic group in which girls work on projects for themselves and other people in the community in order to learn homemaking skills and gain a better understanding of them. For the girls that actively participate in its activities, the Homemaking Club proves an enriching and rewarding experience.

Running a high school library would be an impossible task for one person to undertake alone. For this reason a corps of girls have donated their free time to aid Mrs. Ober in the smooth operation of the Shrewsbury High School library, and their special organization is aptly named the 020 Club. The girls are taught, under Mrs. Ober's tutelage, how to shelve books and magazines, repair and cover old and damaged books, and aid any SHS student in need.

Because 020 is a club it takes on more than routine library activities. It has donated two baskets this year to needy families, sponsored a book sale, and sent toys to orphaned children. The members of 020 are a dedicated group of girls, and they serve Shrewsbury by serving you.

Nancy Orrizzi arranges books on the cart for new volumes.

Diane Rano, Nancy Orrizzi, and Christine Petersen busy themselves at the library desk with various activities.

One of the duties of 020 members is to aid the student in finding library material. Here Diane Rano helps senior Susan Johnson find a book.

The collective "blood, sweat, and tears" of two journalism classes are poured into Shrewsbury's monthly paper—the Town Crier. These students collect, sort, report, and write news and coverage articles; they proof-read, block, type, edit, final-type, and re-edit each article; they run the huge presses that produce each page that composes the school paper; and finally they stand with outstretched arms on Friday afternoons to sell you the finished product.

The classes also put together and publish the Colonial Journal, an anthology of students' prose, poetry, and creative writings. The Journal comes out quarterly, and the Town Crier monthly, but the efforts of diligent students go on daily to make SHS an informed and happy student body.

Seniors make posters to advertise the latest Town Crier contest.

Students spend much time writing, proofreading, and correcting the articles before they are finally typed. Here Pat Garrepy, Kathy Keddy, Nancy Sivret, and Elaine Zingarelli work on articles for the forthcoming issue.

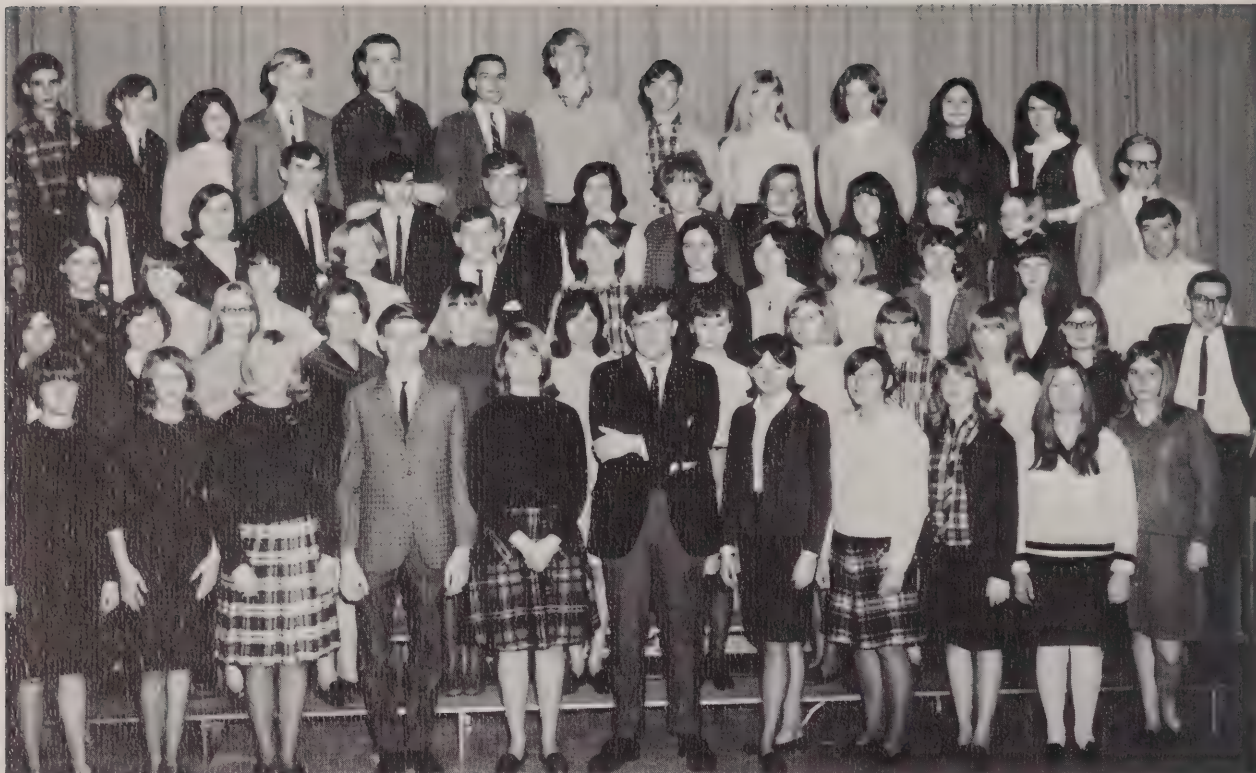

Besides the literary aspect of the paper there is also much manual work to be done. Here Everett Jarvis develops a metal master in the press room.

The present world is fine for most of us, but a select group of SHS students with a superabundance of dramatic talent find that un reality is, oh, so much better. These students revel in the glow of colored lights, greasepaint, curtain calls and applause. At Shrewsbury we find the minority bringing to the majority the benefit of amusing dramatic productions skillfully enacted.

What is visible to us on the auditorium stage is only a portion of the vital work of Masque and Wig. The monthly meetings often include a discussion of a variety of plays; the group sponsors field trips to see productions put on by professional groups, sponsors the traveling repertory theater groups which visit Shrewsbury, and annually represents the school in the Massachusetts Drama Festival. The members of Masque and Wig are especially fortunate in that they have the opportunity to dwell in the best of two worlds.

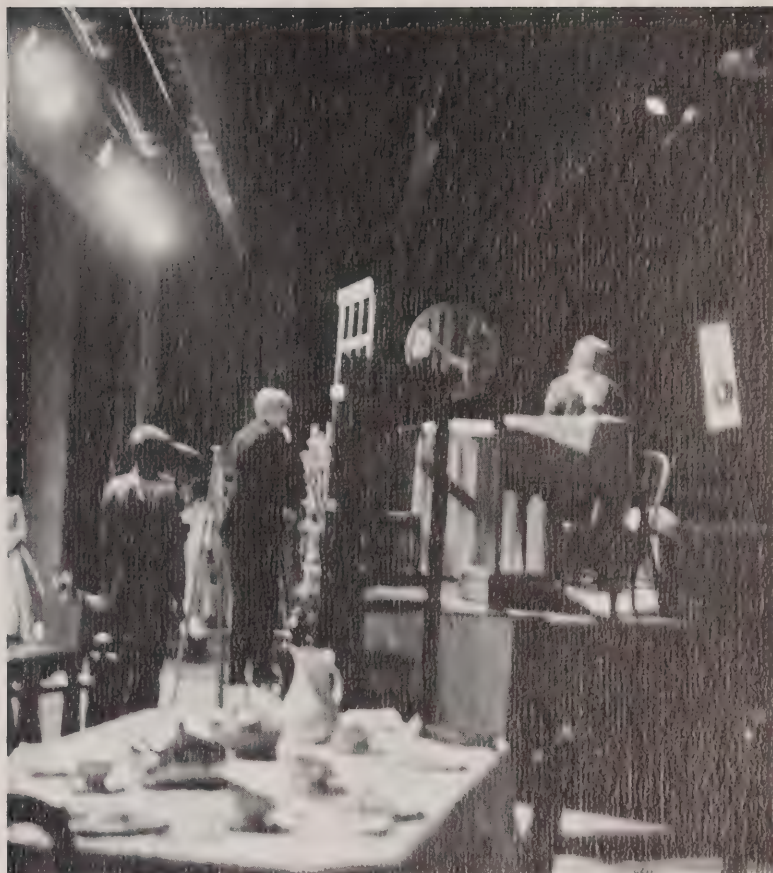

The hard-working members of Masque and Wig gather together to discuss one of their fine upcoming productions.

At the regularly held meetings Mr. Rose and the club members discuss the attributes and dramatic possibilities of a number of plays. After all probable stage problems are considered a play is chosen by vote of the members.

Confusion and chaos reign backstage as rehearsals progress and opening night draws closer.

Finally, intricate stage business and timing are perfected. Here members of the cast of "The Miracle Worker" rehearse one of the more technical scenes for the last time.

After long hours of study and rehearsal the cast anxiously awaits the opening curtain. The spirit of group effort and cooperation carries across the footlights as a smooth and moving production.

The Junior Red Cross is a high school organization composed of student representatives elected from each homeroom in the school. Its purpose is to encourage students to participate in school, community, and civic activities. The group commences its work in the fall with an annual enrollment drive, and continues its projects throughout the school year. These projects are always important and helpful, such as sending a chest with school and health supplies to a deprived area. Although the group is a hard-working organization in itself, it could not exist without the support and cooperation of the entire student body.

Forward

For students that have a definite inclination toward scientific "wheeling and dealing" the relatively young Science Club exists to satisfy their desires. Composed of twenty members and four senior officers, the club has this year undertaken the preparation of the 1966 Science Fair—and will itself exhibit a lunar project.

The club undoubtedly owes a great debt to its advisor, Mr. Ferris, who plans science-oriented lectures and films to be shown in conjunction with the club. With the club's help, students find infinite rewards in probing the depths of science outside the classroom.

In sports, you're either a winner or a loser—it's as simple as that. Here at Shrewsbury, we're all winners—each and every one of us. We walk straight and hold our heads high, because that's the way it is at Shrewsbury.

Behind the able leadership and inspiration provided by co-captains Jack Orrizzi and Paul Jordan, Shrewsbury High School compiled its best gridiron record since 1953, winning eight games while losing only one.

From August '65 when a hot, sultry sun beats down on the helmeted heads and parched throats of SHS gridders to . . .

November '65 when a cold and blustery wind tears through the blue and white jerseys of the rugged Colonials, it's . . .

Run and kick. Run and pass. Run and block. Run and tackle. Run and run for your life.

Calisthenics. Scrimmage. Practice. Listen and concentrate because practice makes perfect.

September 25, 1965—Shrewsbury at Marlboro. This is THE big game, but we are defeated—bitterly defeated.

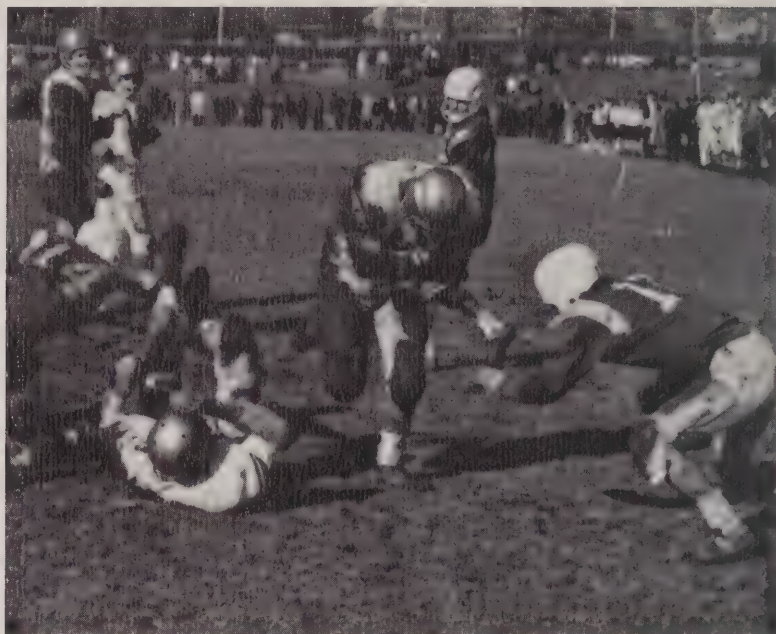

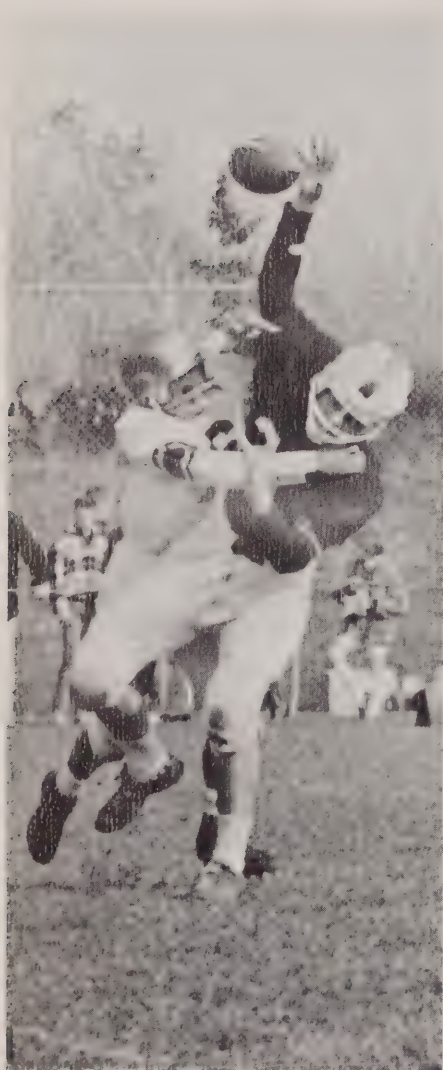

October 2, 1965—Shrewsbury plays Maynard. We win and win and win and win. Eight games.

Go, Shrewsbury, go—for eight in a row, for every game is THE big game.

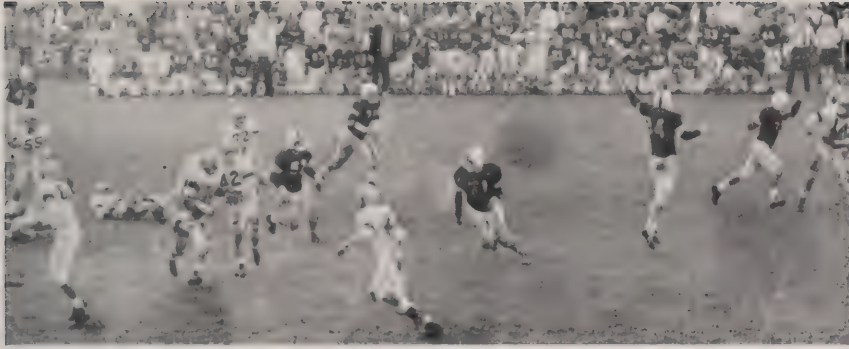

Amidst a swarm of Auburn defenders, halfback Skip Hare, displaying second effort, struggles for that extra yard as he sweeps right end.

En route to paydirt, burly, 200-pound fullback Bob Catalina bowls over Auburn defenders as he rumbles over left tackle.

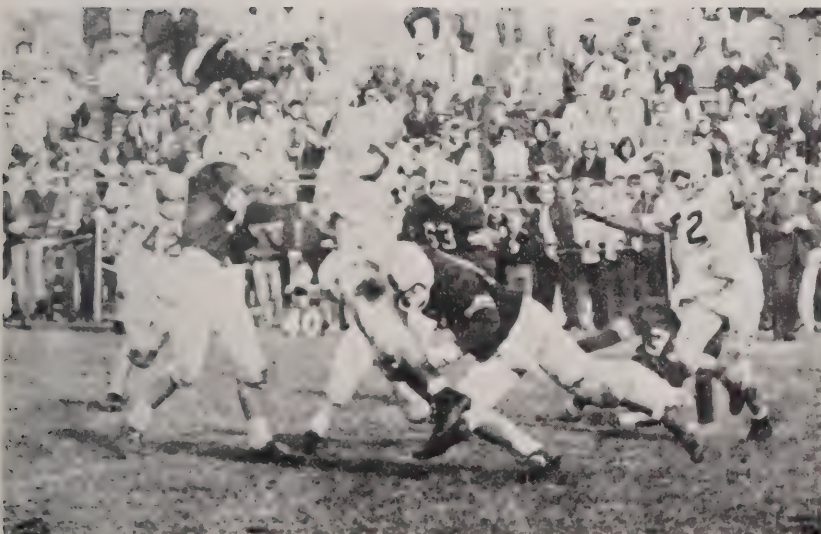

Defensive end Nello Coppellotti breaks up an enemy pass as Shrewsbury rolls past Wachusett 21-8.

Pass! Pass! Quarterback Eric Johnson executes a perfect screen pass against surprised Wachusett defenders to Skip Hare while end John Covotta, tackle Paul Jordan, and guard Al Valente form the blocking wall.

Touchdown! Bob Catalina, leaving a wake of fallen linemen, falls into the end zone. Six points. Go, Shrewsbury, go!

In a wave of white jerseys, Al Valente, Jack Orrizzi, and Paul Jordan surge into the Wachusett backfield in an all-out effort to smother the quarterback.

MVP

Behind the leadership of 6'3" 210 lb. quarterback Eric Johnson, Shrewsbury's potent offense clicked for touchdowns after touchdowns as it rumbled its way down the victory trail. Big number 14. Pass. Run. Kick. A triple threat. A quarterback must be tough—must be able to take bone-jarring tackles time and time again. Eric Johnson is a tough quarterback. Eric Johnson is tough.

In leading his team to a superb 8-1 record, Eric Johnson personally accounted for 54 points scored, second in the county only to teammate Noel Hare.

Run. Throw. Kick. Score. Touchdown.

MVP

In every endeavor there is one person who stands out in a crowd. A man apart from the rest. To us it is Noel (Skip) Hare, Shrewsbury's left halfback who led the county in scoring with 96 points. Along with teammate Eric Johnson, Skip ran, kicked and scored his way to the all-state football selections.

Number 41 and number 14. Reversed but equal. Excellence equals excellence.

Strive for perfection. Sweat for it and slave for it; and once it is achieved, cherish it above all other things.

Skip Hare—a man apart from the rest.

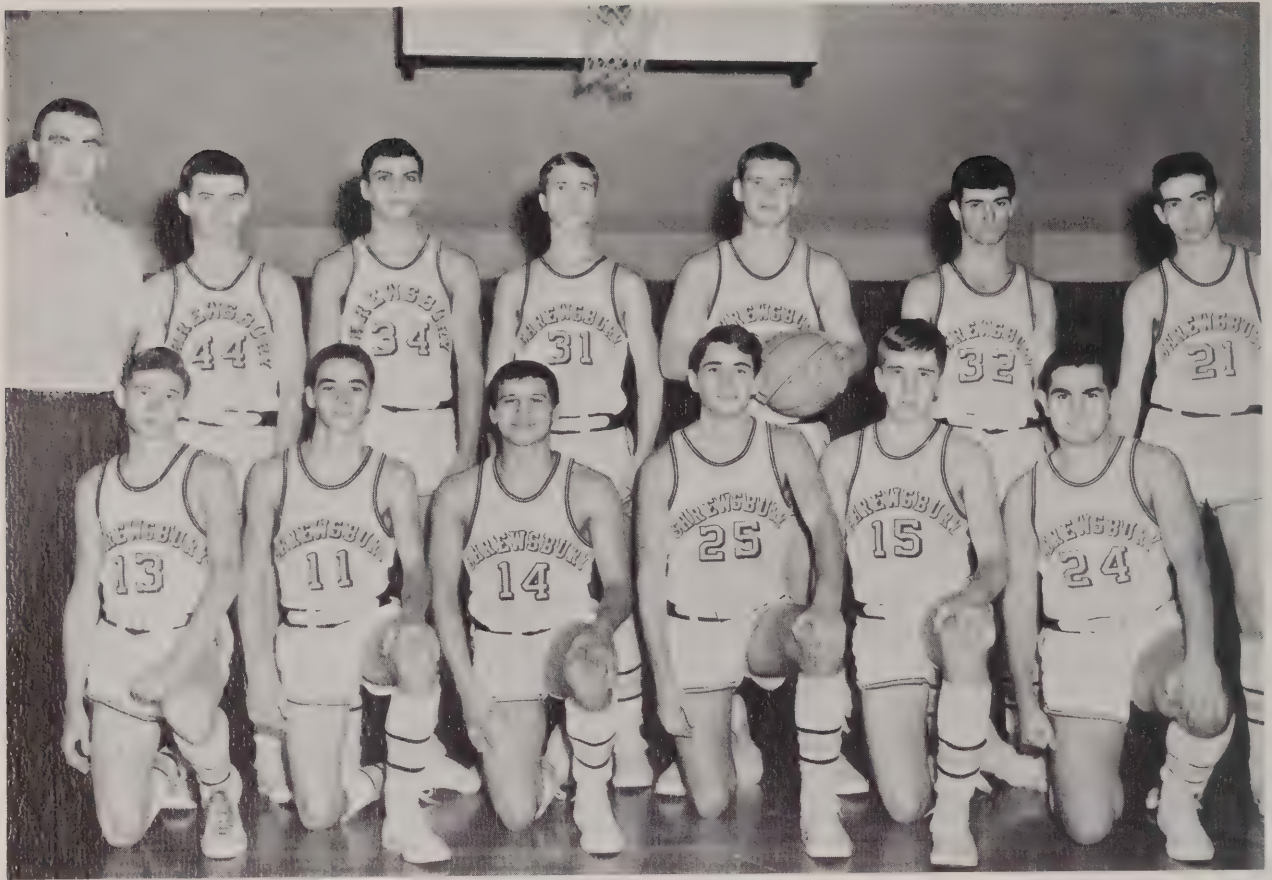

Quarterback Eric Johnson leaps for extra yardage as Shrewsbury rolls to an impressive 29-0 Thanksgiving Day victory over Auburn High School.

Day and night, a coach lives his sport. His mind is constantly on the game. Play to win, but accept defeat like a man. If the team plays well, then it is a tribute to the boys, but if the team fares poorly, then it reflects the coach's image. Shrewsbury fared well during the 1965-1966 campaign, compiling an overall 11-7 record. Congratulations are extended to coach William Paquette, shown here explaining last minute details, for a successful first year as head basketball coach.

Shrewsbury versus Classical. Eric Johnson, defended man-to-man, pops in two points from the outside corner.

Double-teamed by Northbridge defenders, Guy Ferrante looks desperately for a free man.

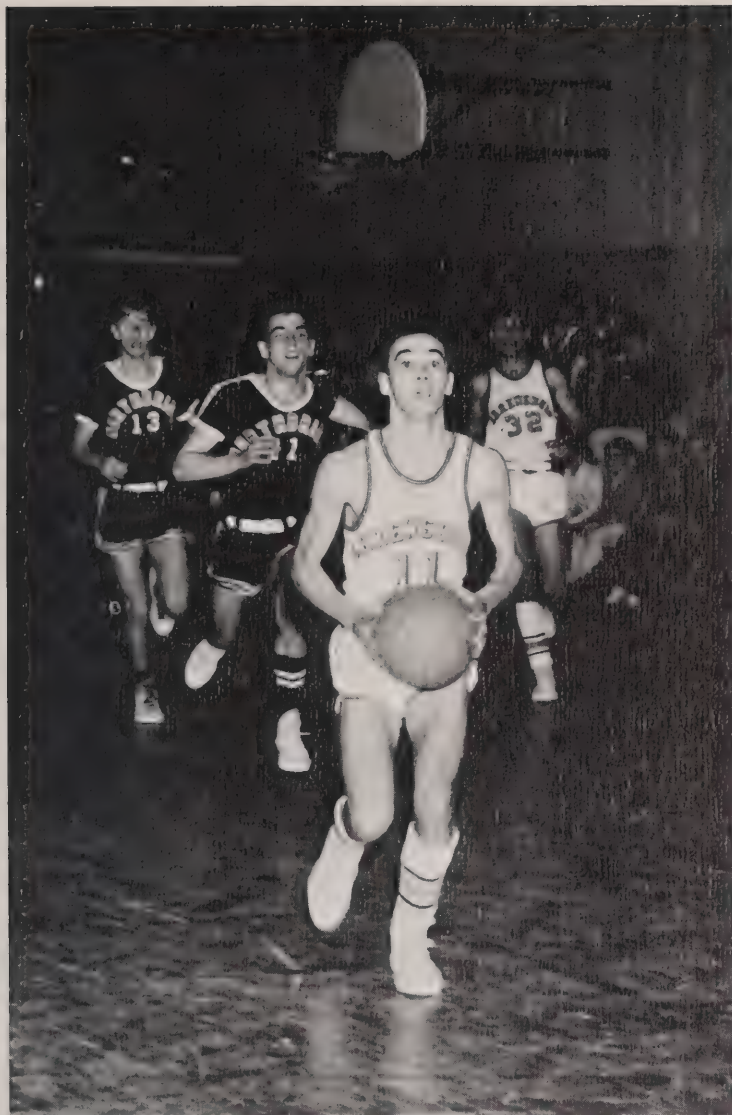

Leaping high, Mike Collins struggles to control a jump-ball as teammate Mike Cipro looks on.

Time-out! Coach Paquette takes time to plan strategy and give a few encouraging words to his sweaty, tired troops.

Butch Vuona finds himself alone near the basket as Shrewsbury's fast break clicks for two points.

With only the basket to keep him company, All-State selection Eric Johnson tips in an easy layup.

As the scoreboard triumphantly flashes the final score, spectators and fans flood the court to congratulate their heroes after a hard-fought battle. "V" for Victory. Hoop it up, Shrewsbury High, hoop it up! Well done, team . . . well done Coach Paquette.

Under the able leadership of Coach Kleminich, the Shrewsbury High baseball team has made three District Three playoffs since 1963, once progressing as far as the final round of the Western Massachusetts tournament before being eliminated by Pittsfield. A team and, in turn, its coaches, are judged by the won-lost record compiled through the years. Using this as a basis, congratulations are extended to the coaching staff and personnel of Shrewsbury's fine baseball squad. *First Row, left to right: P. Arena, K. Bisceglia, R. Paradise, N. # We Try Harder

Before the game, a coach is the loneliest person alive. He stands alone. He ponders. He thinks. He reviews the lineup—but most of all, he worries. How well will they play today? Will we win or lose? If we lose, then we try harder because there is always the next game, but if we win . . . well, then we know that all the preparation, all the practice, and all the sweat was well worth the effort. You're either a winner or a loser. Coach Kleminich is a winner.

Sand, Spikes and Sweat . . .

Fly like a bird. Skip Hare soars through the air a distance of 23'3½" in the broad jump, enough to take first place in several A.A.U. track and field meets. Skip also placed first in the 100-yard dash (time: 10.2 seconds), and threw the shot put 53'10½" in accumulating a record number of points for his school.

Before the meet—you sweat. During the meet—you sweat. After the meet—it is only after the meet that you relax to some degree. Pressure. Competition. Win. Your mouth is dry and parched. You're tired—dog tired, but still you push. You push harder and harder until the race is over, for there can be only one winner and you pray that you are he.

Big Jack Orrizzi, face grimaced, muscles straining, tosses the shot put into orbit.

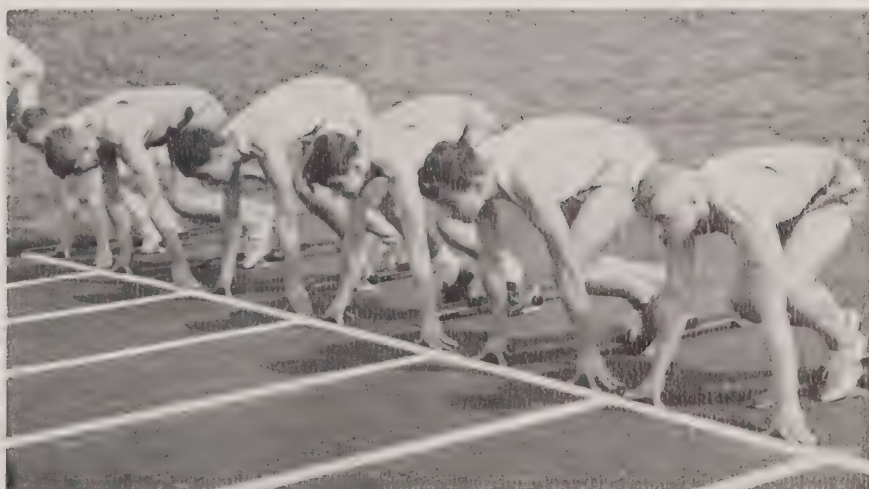

Pushing for that extra inch, Tom Atwood jumps for distance.

Skip Hare, unbeaten in the shot put event during regular competition, remains as such.

Field hockey is a demanding sport calling for a supreme effort from every member of the team. Our team, under the capable leadership of Co-captains Sheila Robinson and Jeanne Tammi, battled cold winds, tedious practices, and bitter frustrations. Despite an unsuccessful season, the girls' enthusiasm and sportsmanship reigned high at every hard-played game. Through the fine coaching of Mrs. Caron the girls gained the experience and training necessary for a great season. We can never forget the heated tension of the last Clinton game and the tearful but victorious overtime. As the last ball swished through the basket, the Varsity stood 8 wins and 4 losses in league play. Two student leaders lead their gym class in vigorous exercising.

Several young girls, physically fit and mentally alert, are chosen each year by the women's physical education instructors to aid them in weekly gym classes. It is the duty of each of these girls to lead the warm-up exercises and assist the teachers during class. For the girls it is a chance to develop their leadership potential, and for the instructors it is a lessening of responsibility and the physical exhaustion that comes from training active and highly vocal SHS students.

Ann Kehoe and Pam Gordon demonstrated graceful art of the jumping jack to an admiring audience of athletes.

Throughout high school there are special moments, those whose memories linger a bit longer and glow a bit brighter in our minds. They are only fleeting, but because of their celerity, they are the most precious. Our Junior Prom—"The Midas Touch." Our last Victory Dance—"Satisfied." perfect 8-1 record. Their drive and determination on the gridiron in the true spirit of '66" was honored by their body of fans. Their gains and glory as a team passed into history to the throbbing beats of the Mau Mau's, and the torch was passed to three young tri-captains who could continue to lead the Colonials in the vibrant spirit that '66 initiated.

"There is a Meeting Here Tonight"

Some people don't seem to like anything.

"There is a meeting . . . there is a meeting . . . there is a meeting here tonight . . ." But it was more than just a meeting; it was a huge gathering to cheer our football players on to their eighth victory—and a nearly perfect season; it was two hours of folk songs by the famous and near famous, to which SHS students jubilantly added their multi-toned voices. But most of all, it was a moment of rest for fourteen Seniors who ran out on that gridiron November 25 and walked back with victory in their pockets. The 1965 Hootenanny—a salute to the Spirit of '66.

Hootenanny '65

Christine Flynn—another Joan Baez?!

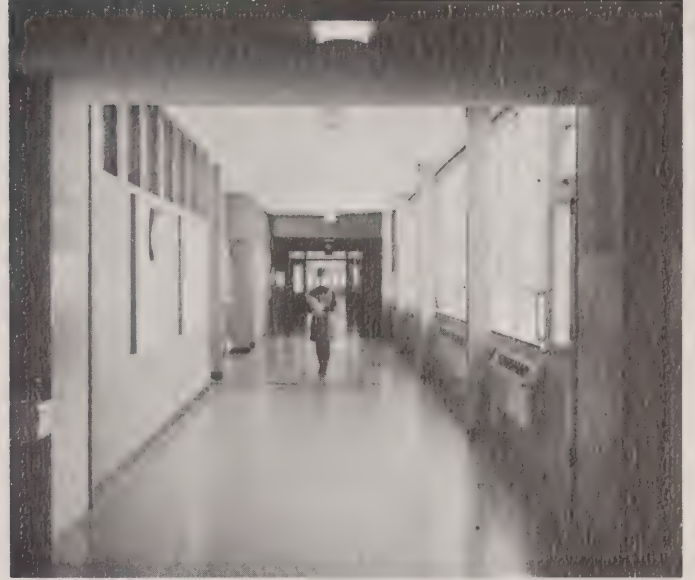

The singers get together for a final number.

Seniors Unleashed

From 8:00 when the corridors become a swarming mass of students trying to beat the bell . . .

. . . until 3:00 when the last student staggers wearily from the P.M. room, SHS is filled with the fun, vitality, and humor of the "Spirit of '66."

"I think I should have punted."

"Don't tell me to go easy on my milk. I've got a special deal with the lady who sells it."

"Last night was an easy night for homework—only twenty-five books."

"Actually, we don't win these games with practice. We have this gridiron ballet, see . . ."

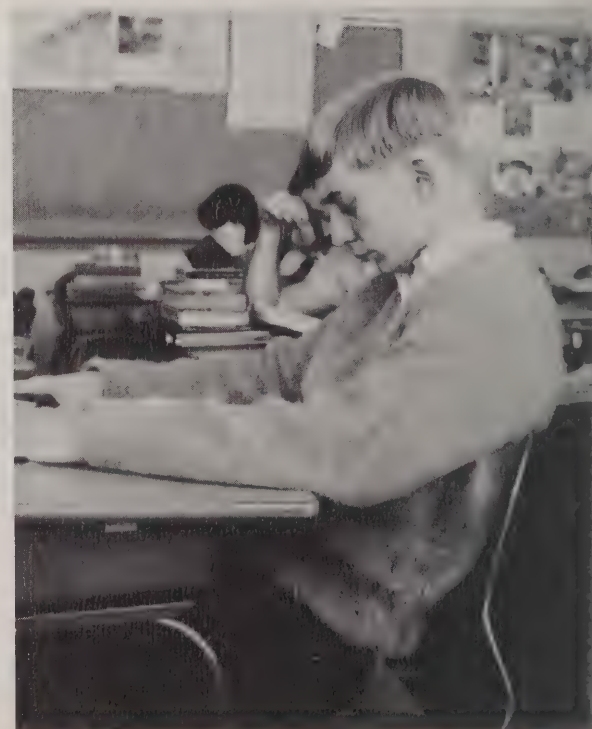

"Girls, I hate to say anything, but when I did this headstand my back . . ."

"Are you sure it's summer you want to stamp out, Judy?"

"And bringing up the rear we have—Pat!"

". . . and so we have chosen as most symbolic of the Spirit of '66 . . ."

"I want a word with all you tigers . . ."

"Which way is the powder room?"

"Now just pretend that you're after an Auburn High quarterback, and . . . sic 'im!"

"Holy Moly"

"If you'd stop looking at those pictures and help me, Carl, we wouldn't have to stay here until 5:30 every night."

"Us P.O.D. teachers would rather fight than switch!"

"O.K., you guys, who stole my third ice cream sandwich?"

"I have a feeling we might lose the Marboro game if things go on this way."

"I'll have one of those, and two of these, and, uh, four of these I guess."

"They tell me these exercises are good for me, but all I get is a back ache!"

"Anybody without his sweatsuit will have to do twenty extra jumping jacks this afternoon."

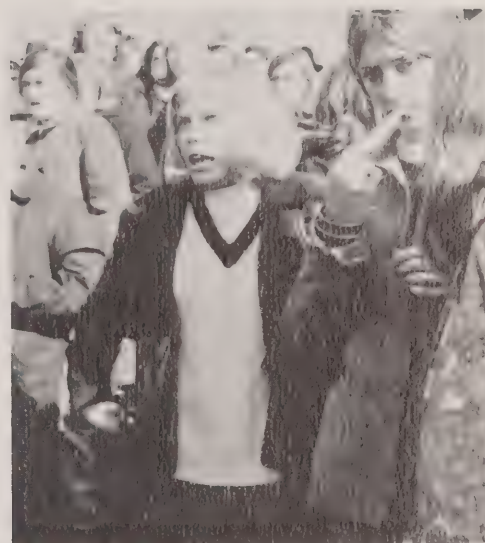

"Put your right foot in, put your right foot out, put your right foot in, and shake it all about."

"I'm sorry, son, but your feet are a bit over regulation size."

"This sure beats wearing a dunce cap."

"Hey, Coach, don't you think you should put Whelan in for awhile?"

Grace—"I knew we should have stayed home tonight."
Moe—"What do you mean, we're only behind by forty points."

Thirty-five Certified Trained Instructors
Looking Forward To Guiding Your Progress

And so it ends, as we have always known it must. We pause and think quietly, and sadly, of the four years of high school that are no more; of the football games and formal dances; of the hour-long classes and favorite teachers; of the rollicking spirit that pervaded SHS; of each other.

The Class of 1966 is now a memory, a memory that lives in two hundred twenty-four of us as we take our final steps from adolescence to maturity. The gains and glory of '66 live on in our minds, in our hearts, and finally in our Colonial—a book written with each game we won, with each joke we played, with each tear we shed.

And so we pause, but only briefly, for as wonderful as high school has been, something more exciting awaits us. We are ready. We are going, proudly and assuredly, to meet it. Good-bye.
